OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.
WASHINGTON D. C., APRIL 20, 1875.
The heart of every true American beats faster and throbs with greater loyalty in the recollection of what is occurring now in Massachusetts—the centennial of the impulses, trials, deprivations and daring deeds of the founders of American liberty. As all the forgotten facts are unearthed, it brings to our mind many things we have long forgotten or never knew, but we are unanimous in believing and acknowledging that the plain hand of a Divine Providence directs the fate of a great people.
It was a happy thought when the Orator of the day stated that it is the signal felicity on this occasion, that on the one-hundredth anniversary of the first battle in the war of American Independence, I may salute you (the President), who led to victory the citizen soldiers of American liberty, as the first elected President of the true Republic of the United States.
Fortunate man! To whom God has given the priceless boon of associating his name with that triumph of freedom which will bind all sections in a closer and more perfect union for the establishment of justice and the security of the blessings than these States have ever known.
Captain Queen, U. S. Navy, reports his arrival at Annapolis, in the Saranac, March 7. He had acquired in the recent disturbances which had resulted in the death of an American citizen, and submitted a report in which he says the attack upon the Protestant chapel was most outrageous, and that the majority of the people influenced and approved the extermination of the Protestants, and he has reason to believe that the teaching and influence of the Roman Catholic curate instigated the assault.
A formal accusation against the curate was pending, but there seemed no prospect of bringing him to account, owing to the present unfavorable condition of affairs.
It might as well be confessed that the Americans, as a people, have a full share of "cheek." Notwithstanding it has been repeatedly announced that the Government will not permit expeditions to the Black Hills until that region can be acquired in a systematic way from the Indians, parties have continued to organize in different part of the country with the avowed purpose of prospecting for gold in that country. It is stated one gang of adventurers has been brought back to Fort Laramie, by the United States Cavalry just as they were about being gobbled up by the Indians.
Commissioner Smith, of the Indian Bureau, has issued a circular to Indian agents, calling their attention to the fact that Congress last session incorporated a clause in the act making appropriations for the Indian Service for this year, which requires "all able-bodied male Indians between the ages of eighteen and forty-five to perform service upon the reservation for the benefit of themselves or of the tribe, at a reasonable rate, to be fixed by the agent in charge, and to an amount equal in value to the supplies to be delivered. The commissioner directs all Indian agents to offer the Indians every possible encouragement to give up their nomadic habits and live like white men, thus making the Indians work for their board.
Frauds were discovered in the repairs of mail bags and it was conclusively shown that new bags were deliberately made for the purpose to charge up the repairs. The following advice has been received by the Postmaster General from some person in New York who signs himself "A Friend of a Pure Administration of Every Department." "To prevent swindling in repairing mail bags. Let the contractors keep the bags in repair for one year." The letter had no address or date.
The arguments before Secretary Delano in the quadruplex telegraph case, Mr. Edison of Newark N. J. inventor of the Duplex and quadruplex instrument, was continued yesterday, when the Secretary pronounced a decision to the effect that he would decline to grant either of the motions that were submitted, either to dismiss the case or continue it, and allow additional testimony to be taken in it. In making this decision the Secretary said he would reserve the expression of his opinion as to whether the patent should or should not be issued.
The Navy Department has been officially advised of the drowning of Mid-shipman Cox, of Tennessee, of the Naval Academy. He was in a boat with several companions, practising when it was set. They all started to swim for shore, which all succeeded in reaching save Cox, whom it was thought was taken with cramps in the water, and sunk before assistance could reach him.
Lieut. Col. F. Grant, A. D. C., First Lieutenant Fourth Cavalry, has made arrangements to resign from the service next fall, to enter into the banking business in Washington. The firm of which he becomes a member will be known as Sherman & Grant, the senior member being John Sherman, Jr., a nephew of Gen. Sherman, and who was lately engaged in business with H. D. Cooke, Jr., a son of ex-Governor Cooke. The new firm will be organized May 1, although Col. Grant will not give the business his personal attention until after his return from the expedition now fitting out under General Custer for the Yellowstone.

The following spicy letter was written by a lady to the N. Y. Graphic: Wagoner's Article on the Frontier.
I found myself some months ago in the parlor of the Queen's Hotel, Toronto, in company with two dignified matrons, and their blooming daughters, sweet, good girls, brought up from their earliest youth with a full knowledge of the ten commandments.
"Really," said Mrs. Jones, a portly, good-natured lady, generally the bright, witty one of the party. "I am so weighed down with anxiety that I can hardly sleep. They say the Custom House officers were never so vigilant before, and how on earth I am to get that silver tea-set and all that velvet, to say nothing of two dozen pairs of gloves, through, I am sure I can't tell."
"Dear mamma," sympathetically replied that lady's offspring, in her slow, drawing tone and husky voice, which always made me want to clear out her throat for her, "it makes me so fearfully nervous that I am perfectly wretched.
There's that forty yards of silk I must get through, and I just couldn't resist that lovely cloaking velvet, it was so reasonable; but they say only last week three ladies were stopped and everything taken from them, and they had to pay a heavy fine besides." Having delivered this learned and highly practical address, the little lady looked preternaturally solemn, shook her curls, smoothed her ribbons, and proposed that the shopping be finished, which was received with acclamation. I watched them depart, for I had no desire to invest in silk and satin, and, as package after package was sent to the hotel, "I solemnly thought of the morrow." The sun rose bright and clear the following morning, and I, putting on my hat and a pleasant expression, joined my four miserable companions and we took our seats in the train. Their minds were full of the terrible things which might happen to them and their trunks, overflowing with such beautiful things, to which they might be compelled to bid a last farewell. So it is no wonder their feelings, as well as the thermometer, were at boiling heat that hot day—the middle of August—while I, meus amicus resti, went bravely forth.
All felt that things were safer if they were worn, so each one had his own particular treasure with him, and I do not think I can do better than describe the appearance of my companions. Mrs.
Jones, our portly lady, had in an evil moment seen a silver tea-set. Her peace was gone from that hour, and only returned when she became its owner. But her troubles were only beginning, for, of course, she could have no hope of this getting through the Custom House without a heavy duty if discovered. So the tea-set, cream-jug, and sugar-bowl forwarded an excellent battle, only a little stiff perhaps. The silver silver was worn as a breast-plate, and the small articles were tied upon the crinoline. She was the bright, witty one of the party as a general thing, but I shall never forget the preternatural gravity and the wonderful stiffness with which she conducted herself. The waiter made her dress so tight she could hardly breathe, and the handles of the teapot and cream pitcher were ever present with her.
Miss Jones was not to be outdone by her mamma, and appeared in a heavy black silk, with a velvet reingote down to her knees. Did she suffer? Let the great beads of perspiration and her scarlet face be the answer. Being a really delicate girl, I was afraid the heat and excitement together would be more than her feeble frame could endure, but, as Sam Slick says, "There's a sight of wear in human nature," especially nature when silk and velvet tremble in the balance.
As to Mrs. Smith. I think people were under the impression that she was an exposed lunatic or an Indian chief returning from a war dance.
Her black hair rejoined in a pink, a blue, and a white ostrich feather. She had a steel band to cover them under the roll of her hat, but the wind had risen, and they were all rampant and war-like. Her traveling shawl was thrown jauntily over her arm. It looked very innocent, but I happened to know it contained six yards of black velvet, and enough sashes and neck-ribbons to last an ordinary lifetime.
Mr. Brown and I brought up in the rear, he with an Ulster overcoat buttoned up to his ears and a scalpin cap under his beaver.
What he did with his hands remains to this day an inscrutable mystery. "One of those things no fellow can find out," but I recollect his looking very fully into the history of John Giblin, and it occurred to me that he may have taken a lesson from that worthy. I also remember hearing him smother an exclamation as the cars gave a sudden start and threw him against the seat. I thought I heard a crash and noticed a peculiar odor, but as there were merely blots on the seat, I thought it was a mere blot.
When I add that all the party were supplied with skin muffs and silk umbrellas, you have the photograph completed.
Just as we reached the Suspension Bridge and every head was stretched from the window to catch a sight of Niagara Falls, an individual in blue, with a star upon his breast, entered our car, and all idea of the beauties of nature vanished. "This wretch," as Mrs. Jones would insist upon calling him, wanted to peer into hand-bags, examine shawl-straps, and other well exhibited marks of civility, deplorable to see in a lord of creation. He was not, however, sufficiently acquainted with woman's duplicity to shake the shawl.
Slowly the train puffed into the depot, and the hastily guilty crowd hurried to the examining room. After a little trouble the officers were found to inspect our trunks, and all the participating myself, for I literally had bought nothing in Canada, got along without difficulty. I unfortunately fell into the hands of a beginner who was very anxious to do his whole duty, and do it well. I stood by in silent agony as he took out one tray after another, stirred things round as if he were making a pudding, and demanded gloves, ribbons, sashes, and velvet in rapid succession. Finally having tried to make me pay duty on a dress two years old, and leaving my wardrobe in a dreadful condition, I was allowed to slip from his clutches, and passed rejoicing into the train, which was just beginning to move out.
"Of course, being a woman," remarked Mrs.
Jones in a very impressive manner, with an exceedingly red face and a drop of perspiration hanging from the end of her Roman nose, "of course, being only a woman, I cannot expect my opinion to have much weight, but I will remark, simply for my own gratification, that I think it is a sin and a shame that ladies, carrying only their own wardrobes." (But this included, of course, "murmured Mrs. Smith (sotto voce) "should be hampered by such horrid laws, and if women ever have their rights and get to Congress this should receive their earliest attention.")
